1. With the above given in mind, and in view of the fact that the writer has had considerable operational contact with the individual since mid. 11/20/47, he is being recommended in this original form since he believes any attempt to correct or edit it would detract from his value. It also gives an insight into A-125-1's personal feelings towards the persons described herein, and provides a rather vivid picture of the operational events which preceded and followed the capture of A-125-1. It should be noted here that the Station has the highest regard for the spy in which A-125-1 goes about his operational assignments. He has proven to be a completely loyal and reliable Principal Agent and has demonstrated a sense of responsibility and motivation equal to that of most Special Agents. The writer is preparing a report concerning A-125-1's evaluation, and feels that a "hit on the back" has been long overdue for this agent.

Do not attempt to identify persons listed in the report by aliases:

17. Several witnesses testified that only 20 or 30 men were actually captured in the Khatanga station; the remaining 80 or so were taken to the first Russian station, and placed in order to make it appear that a general attack was under their formation directed by the army and militia. In the conflicting reports concerning the present number of men still in the hills, ranging from 400 - 450, our guess is that the remainder of the force are currently, and that they here would rush to the fight once word spread that the 1000 is in contact to say that the capture of the above frontier station was a victory, while it had the opposite result to weaken the others; it has also resulted in a general demoralization of some of the troops, and has thus all the more dangerous consequences in this respect.
