The latest documentary effort by
Under-Appreciated Science Productions, called "S-4 Informers"

This six and one half hour long film was finished in late September 2009 after many long months of work by Rick Keefe. This documentary contains the first ever wide release of the Connor O'Ryan testimony, detailing the specifics of the above top secret laboratory installation within Area 51 known as S-4.

Connor O'Ryan is the pseudonym of an S-4 sentry who defected, and approached Wendelle Stevens in the fall of 1991 and gave testimony as to the activities of certain high officials at the S-4 facility. S-4 rests inside the edge of the Papoose mountains that lay alongside the dry Papoose Lake. S-4 is located just a few miles southwest of the infamous Groom Lake Naval Air Base, for which Area 51 is most famous. However, S-4 is likely an even more secluded and guarded base than Groom Lake.

This documentary presents the testimonies and circumstantial evidence regarding the highest extreme of classified secret activities of U.S. Navy scientists, engineers, guards, assassins, and certain government leaders and corporate executives that are conducting special ops missions and advanced experiments involving dangerous elements and energy sources out of the view of congressional oversight and public watchdogs.

As well, it appears that a select clique of individuals, organizations, and corporations are profiting handsomely through seeding captured alien technology that has been back-engineered at S-4, then introduced into our society through companies of their choosing, rewarding those "in the know" handsomely, if not illegally, and unethically stunting the spread of this science to the world at large, choosing to keep it secret in order to Testimony of CIA Assassin Recruited from Navy SEALs Goes Online with Documents by Michael Salla, Ph.D.

July 16, 9:19 AM Honolulu Exopolitics Examiner

On July 13, the New York Times ran a story about the CIA

running an assassination squad using U.S. military special forces against foreign terrorists without Congressional approval on the orders of former Vice President Dick Cheney. The Times story confirms claims by Seymour Hersh in March 2009 that an assassination squad had been created that reported directly to Cheney using special forces personnel. The covert CIA project was shut down by CIA Director Leon Panetta when he learned of it on June 23. Details of the project were passed on the next day to the U.S. Congress and led to furor over the reports. A statement by seven members of the House Intelligence Committee concerning the CIA misleading Congress was subsequently released. The covert CIA program allegedly began in 2001 soon after the 911 attacks. The unfolding revelations of CIA death squads using U.S. military special forces personnel coincides with the online release of video testimony of a former U.S. Navy SEAL who said he was recruited to perform 18 assassination assignments for the CIA. If true, the SEAL's testimony reveals that covert assassinations predate the 911 attacks, and also targeted U.S. citizens. Curiously, the assassinations were related to covert projects Dick Cheney was allegedly involved in when he was Secretary of Defense for George H.W. Bush from 1989 to 1993.

Connor O'Ryan was a pseudonym used by Derek Hennessy who claims in video testimony recorded in 1991, that he performed covert missions for the CIA in the 1980s assassinating enemies of the United States. After joining the U.S. Navy in the early 1980s, O'Ryan/Hennessy claims he joined the elite SEALs and was eventually tasked to perform his covert assassination missions. He said that targets of the assassination hits even included U.S. citizens. He described his 18th and final mission as a sergeant for the U.S. Army Green Berets stationed at the U.S. Embassy in Budapest, Hungary.

O'Ryan's/Hennessy's extraordinary claims were investigated over a ten year period by a retired Lt Colonel with the U.S. Air Force, Wendelle Stevens. During his investigation, Stevens was able to confirm Hennessy's military I.D. and that he was assigned to the CIA performing covert missions. Concerned that O'Ryan/Hennessy may have been part of an intelligence operation to discredit him, Stevens did not release the initial results of his investigation until 2001. Video testimony of O'Ryan/Hennessy is included in a set of interviews conducted with Stevens currently being released on the internet. In the interviews, Steven's discussed documents he had in his possession verifying Hennessy's covert CIA missions. One document was apparently written on CIA letter head (see above graphic) with instructions for O'Ryan/Hennessy on his last mission. Steven's read out the document's contents as follows: "You are to report to the American Embassy in Budapest, Hungary. You will be received by S.A. Greywolf. As a unit you will proceed to terminate an ex S.A. David T. Johnson."

According to Stevens, the document was O'Ryan's/Hennessy's final hit order one month before he left his final assignment at a secret facility in Nevada. Another document is O'Ryan's/Hennessy's W-2 salary statement that showed he was earning $74,000 for the CIA. Though only a sergeant he was earning the equivalent of a colonel's salary at the time. Steven's was able to confirm that the serial number and code word on the W-2 were active through an anonymous FBI source. On the video Stevens benefit themselves financially and to promote their aspirations of greater power."

"UFO Hypotheses "S4 Informers" featuring Wendelle Stevens Volume One" (released August 4, 2009)

In the first volume, both Lt. Col Wendelle C. Stevens, USAF (ret.) and Sgt. Maj. Robert O. Dean, Army (ret.) are introduced. In October 1991, Stevens is contacted by a NAVY Seal/CIA assassin claiming to have photos of S-4, a top secret lab complex within Area 51. Volume One explores "Connor O'Ryan," his claims, Stevens, investigation, and this volume also includes testimony by Phil Schneider, a detailed synopsis of Area 51, discussion of Bob Lazar at S-4 by John Lear, and much more.

"UFO Hypotheses "S4 Informers" featuring Wendelle Stevens Volume Two" (released September 4, 2009)

In the second volume, large segments of the "Connor O'Ryan" testimony are presented and examined, focusing on the specific area of Level Two where the S-4 sentry claimed that he spent most of his duty time. Stevens clarifies his hypotheses regarding a U.S. fleet of flying disc spacecraft, supported by an analysis of the STS-48 space shuttle footage by astrophysicist Richard Hoagland, with additional support from cyber-hacker Gary McKinnon's testimony. Then, Stevens shares his insight into S-4 engineer Bill Uhouse, and the ET being who Uhouse claimed he worked with on numerous occasions known as Jarod. This volume concludes with "Connor O'Ryan" testifying on camera that former Vice President Dick Cheney spent time inspecting S-4's Level Two in 1991.

"UFO Hypotheses "S4 Informers" featuring Wendelle Stevens Volume Three" (released September 30, 2009)

In the third volume, Stevens presents Colonel Steve Wilson's evidence and testimony, which confirms key elements of the "Connor O'Ryan" testimony, and also includes evidence gathered about Wilson by Richard Boylan, among others. Following this eye-opening section is a day-by-day breakdown of the time "Connor O'Ryan" spent with Wendelle Stevens, as we follow Stevens through the tense, nervebending days of investigation while the S-4 sentry stayed at Stevens' home, sharing with Stevens all he knew of the S-4 facility. Further into the volume, computer guru Jim Dilettoso, a friend of Stevens, recalls at length how "O'Ryan" came to stay at his ranch in Paradise Valley outside of Phoenix, Arizona for one month, and describes the photos that "O'Ryan" show him during that time. Volume Three wraps up with Stevens, Dean and Dilettoso sharing their current conclusions on these events, followed by an editorial cartoon section by Keefe, and concluding with Schneider's shocking testimony as credits roll.

mistakenly refers to the salary statement as a W-4, but a copy of the W-2 is clearly shown (see slide show) .

Combined with O’Ryan’s/Hennessy’s recorded video testimony, the documents, if genuine, would be smoking gun evidence that a CIA assassination squad using U.S. military personnel predated 2001 and even targeted U.S. citizens. To date, neither of the documents has been released to the public. Only video images are available. Independent document authentication still has to be conducted.

The confirmation of the W-2 by an anonymous FBI contact of Stevens is powerful support for the legitimacy of O’Brian’s/Hennessy’s story. There is good reason, however, to be skeptical about the CIA hit order document’s legitimacy. It is difficult to accept that the CIA would be so explicit in putting on CIA stationary orders to terminate a serving U.S. military non-commissioned officer. One could reasonably argue that such orders, if put on paper, would be done in a more cryptic manner without the CIA logo. This would be consistent with an Assassination Directive that former CIA Director Allen Dulles allegedly drafted in 1961, and was later authorized by a group responsible for covert operations called Majestic-12. The alleged Dulles’ Assassination Directive used the cryptic phrase “it should be wet” as a code word for assassinations designed to protect Majestic-12 operations.

If indeed there has been a CIA assassination program that predates 2001, it may originate from Dulles 1961 draft Assassination Directive. The directive was allegedly received by the chief of CIA counterintelligence, James Jesus Angleton in 1961, and subsequently linked to the President Kennedy Assassination. If O’Connor/Hennessy did eliminate a serving Green Beret in Budapest in 1991 as he claims, then the authority for such an assassination may derive from Dulles’ 1961 draft Assassination Directive.

If O’Ryan’s/Hennessy’s CIA hit order letter is a hoax, that raises an equally perplexing question. Why would Wendelle Stevens, a long time researcher of the UFO phenomenon, be targeted in an elaborate intelligence operation to discredit him with a contrived story about CIA assassins using elite military special forces personnel in 1991? O’Ryan/Hennessy spent an extended period hiding with Stevens and associates while allegedly on the run. During this time, a series of events occurred that persuaded those giving shelter to O’Ryan/Hennessy that he was genuinely being monitored and threatened to return voluntarily to his program. Eventually, O’Ryan/Hennessy disappeared and has never been heard of again.

If O’Ryan’s/Hennessy’s testimony is even partially correct, as Stevens’ confirmation of his W-2 suggests, it would confirm the existence of an assassination team run by the CIA prior to 2001. His testimony reveals that even U.S. citizens were eliminated due to agendas of a highly classified covert operations run out of the CIA. O’Ryan/Hennessy himself apparently become a target when he shared his information with Stevens and this may have been related to his disappearance.

small>For the last nine months of his military service during his final assassination missions, Hennessy was assigned to a covert facility in Nevada called S-4 to perform sentry duty for a highly classified covert project. It was there that he witnessed Dick Cheney arrive one day for an inspection for a project maintaining the secrecy of which was related to his earlier assassination missions.

Cheney Taken Inside S-4 To View Flying Saucers & EBE Bodies by Michael Salla, Ph.D.

July 19, 7:01 AM Honolulu Exopolitics Examiner

Drawing of discs inside S-4. Artist: Agnes Shojak.

Around April 1991, Dick Cheney was taken inside a secret underground facility located in a remote area in Nevada adjacent to Nellis Air Force base to view captured flying saucers and dead extraterrestrial bodies. The startling claims were made by a former security guard at the facility who in October 1991 gave his testimony on video. The guard had documents and photos supporting his claims of working on the secret facility called S-4.

The guard, Derek Hennessy, used the pseudonym Connor O'Ryan in giving his testimony in a set of interviews with Lt Col Wendelle Stevens (USAF, ret.) and his associate Gem Cox. O'Ryan/Hennessy claims he had worked for 8/9 years as a Navy SEAL and performed various covert operations. He said that 18 of these missions were assassinations sanctioned by the CIA or other agencies. During the last nine months of his military service in 1991, he worked at the remote S-4 facility which had stringent security procedures. It appeared that the isolation and security at S-4 helped assassins hide their trail after missions.

O'Ryan/Hennessy described his work on the second level of the S-4 facility. S-4 employed approximately 75 personnel on levels 1 and 2. He said he was aware of a further two levels of the facility, but was never allowed to enter levels 3 and 4. He said that approximately 12-15 personnel worked at Levels 3 & 4. His primary duty was to guard the elevators to them which required three keys, a thumbprint and a retinal scan to open.

O'Ryan/Hennessy described the hangar facilities on level two for storing the seven flying saucers retrieved from various crash sites. There were ten hangar bays in total. The facility was described as "the museum" suggesting it was designed to store advanced extraterrestrial technologies that had been superceded. He revealed how one or more of the flying saucers would be raised to the surface for a flight test. This would only occur when no Russian or other spy satellites were passing overhead. All testing would stop when satellites were detected.

He also described seven tubes with bodies of extraterrestrial biological entities (EBEs) typically described as Grays. A biologist would regularly check the fluids to maintain the right temperature and fluid mix to maintain the bodies. In addition to the photos he showed to two witnesses, O'Ryan/Hennessy drew pictures in his taped interview describing the facilities.

O'Ryan/Hennessy described the day Cheney visited as around the time when the U.S. was closing military bases at the end of the Cold War. Cheney was accompanied by three other officials and escorted by two base security personnel. He said Cheney only visited the first two levels of the S-4 facility and saw both the flying saucers and the bodies of dead extraterrestrials. O'Ryan/Hennessy said:

I was on level two at the time of his visit ... and I watched him go in and he went into the back building and we were called up to guard the front of the hangar areas. ... He saw the bodies too – the seven little grey people.

A supercomputer and photo analysis expert, Jim Dilettoso, allowed O'Ryan/Hennessy to stay at his property for a month. Dilettoso said O'Ryan/Hennessy showed both him and Gem Cox photographs allegedly taken at S-4. He saw photos of what appeared to be extraterrestrial vehicles, and extraterrestrial bodies in glass tubes. He also saw a photo with Dick Cheney standing on a balcony allegedly inside the S-4 facility viewing the area below with the flying saucers and bodies while O'Connor/Hennessy was allegedly on duty. Dilettoso also recognized the former Director of the National Security Agency, Admiral Bobby Ray Inman (USN ret.) as one of the officials in the photo with Cheney.

How credible is O'Ryan's/Hennessy's testimony? The most significant documentary evidence is the W-2 obtained by Stevens (see slide show). The control number (45851), Employer Identification Number (95-6593572) and Employers State ID (2464423P) were checked and confirmed by Stevens' FBI contact. According to the FBI contact, O'Ryan/Hennessy had been "deprogrammed and reprogrammed" after being taken back in to covert programs by the CIA and Naval intelligence on various covert assignments. The W-2 and numbers can be investigated for independent confirmation.

Furthermore, O'Ryan/Hennessy revealed many details in his video testimony to Wendelle Stevens and Gem Cox about his background and events, that can also be investigated for corroboration. Finally, O'Ryan/Hennessy stayed for a month with supercomputer and photo analysis expert, Jim Dilettoso who along with Cox witnessed his photos and a duty roster that O'Ryan/Hennessy showed him.

Dilettoso also described a bizarre incident that changed his initial skepticism towards O'Ryan/Hennessy's amazing story. Returning from a 1991 Thanksgiving party that O'Ryan/Hennessy attended, Dilettoso found a package at the inside front gate of his ranch. Thinking it was for him, Dilettoso took it. When it was later opened, a severed finger was found along with a threatening note directed at O'Ryan/Hennessy to return photos and other evidence of S-4. Together with other strange episodes indicating close surveillance by a mysterious group of people, Dilettoso decided it was time for O'Ryan/Hennessy to leave.

O'Ryan/Hennessy says he decided to come forward after he was told that he had contracted a virulent form of Hodgkin's disease. Being 29 at the time, and in good health with no history of the disease in his family, he suspected that he was being set up for elimination. In retaliation, he decided to become a whistleblower and release photographs taken at S-4.

O'Ryan/Hennessy's remarkable testimony, if substantiated, clearly reveals that Richard Cheney while Secretary of Defense, had directly witnessed S-4, and covert programs involving extraterrestrial life and technology. That may explain why George Bush deferred to Cheney during the 2000 Presidential Campaign on a question concerning when UFO information would be released: "It will be the first thing he (pointing to Cheney) will do. He'll get right on it." Alas, after a tumultuous eight years as Vice-President, Cheney never chose to disclose anything about his alleged visit to S-4, and knowledge of extraterrestrial life and technology.

"The Connor O'Ryan Story:

His real name is Derek Hennessey

The Connor O'Ryan story is a tale currently being told by longtime UFO researcher and retired Air Force Lt. Col. Wendelle Stevens. It concerns whistleblower "Connor O'Ryan" (pseudonym), a US Marine alleged to have been a guard at the secret AF facility in Nevada known as S-4. O'Ryan's real name is Derek Hennessey.

According to Wendelle, Connor O'Ryan contacted him in October 1991 indicating he had information to reveal. Wendelle took O'Ryan in, and he remained with Wendelle and associates of Wendelle in Arizona for a

In the video interview, O'Ryan says that during the nine months he worked as a guard at S-4 (1990-1991) he saw alien discs and alien bodies in cryogenic storage and witnessed a visit by then Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney to the S-4 facility.

O'Ryan portrays himself as increasingly uneasy with the ET mission of S-4, and after a time he identified three other S-4 colleagues who were as discontented as he was. These four men smuggled a camera into the facility and took pictures which they planned to somehow release to the public. Allegedly, the pictures were duplicated and secreted at five locations. In the midst of this, O'Ryan says doctors at S-4 told him he had contracted a fatal form of Hodgkin's disease and he would be discharged for medical reasons. The four conspirators then conferred and decided O'Ryan would be the one tasked with delivering the pictures to someone on the outside. When O'Ryan contacted Stevens he had been out of the military for several weeks and he was, he says on camera, "on the run."

On commission to the CIA

Connor O'Ryan was 29 years old in 1991 and, according to Wendelle, he was "a Marine, a US Navy Black Seal, Delta 6, a sentry at S-4." He had been assigned to "Special Forces, special operations, intelligence" for eight or nine years prior to 1991. The YouTube documentary presents a W-2 type form indicating O'Ryan held the rank of sergeant and was "on a commission to the CIA."

It turns out O'Ryan was a government assassin. One of his jobs was to kill people on orders from the US government. In fact, according to Wendelle, O'Ryan said he had killed 18 people, including US citizens—people O'Ryan described as "enemies of the US government."

These assassinations were carried out periodically after O'Ryan joined the Marines/Special Forces in 1980. Reportedly, the last assassination took place while O'Ryan was working at S-4. Immediately prior to S-4, O'Ryan said he was on "submarine duty."

It seems the modus operandi O'Ryan would

six-week period. At the end of the six weeks, O'Ryan disappeared.

An S-4 whistleblower

S-4, where O'Ryan says he worked, is associated with the secret Air Force Groom Lake Area 51 complex north of Las Vegas, believed to be a location where ET craft and technology are being back-engineered. It is the same location described by another whistleblower, Bob Lazar, who reported in 1989 he had performed engineering work on alien artifacts at S-4.

This month all the information held by Wendelle Stevens on this case is being released in the form of a lengthy documentary produced by Rick Keefe of Arizona and posted on YouTube. (See links on pg. 27 of this issue.)

The film, which is very good, includes video interviews with O'Ryan, Wendelle Stevens, Jim Dilettoso, Bob Dean, and others; the presentation of documents related to the case; and other segments on S-4.

find his orders to kill under his pillow. He would then be dispatched on the "special mission," following which he returned to whatever more normal duties he was assigned to at the time, such as submarine duty or being a guard at S-4.

Six weeks with Wendelle

The events that unfolded in the six-week period after O'Ryan contacted Stevens are complicated. Here is the basic plot line:

October 1991 Wendelle Stevens is contacted by Connor O'Ryan who tells Wendelle there are discs and alien bodies at S-4.

Wendelle permits O'Ryan to stay at his Arizona home and the two begin a dialogue. Wendelle learns the man is a government assassin and that on his last "special mission" O'Ryan killed a fellow Special Forces sergeant in Hungary.

O'Ryan tells Wendelle of the smuggled camera, the pictures, and his health condition. He says the four confederates at S-4 picked Wendelle Stevens as the outside person they wished to contact.

O'Ryan claims five sets of the pictures were made, referred to as "caches," secreted at various locations. O'Ryan's confederates at S-4 have the idea the pictures are an insurance policy which will ensure their survival in case their illicit picture-taking activities are discovered by their superiors.

O'Ryan is not sure he actually has a fatal disease, but if he does he strongly suspects he was given the disease by his superiors because he "knows too much" after having assassinated 18 people.

O'Ryan says he has mailed a parcel with one set of the pictures to Wendelle, but when they go to pick up the parcel, it does not arrive.

Threatening letters

After O'Ryan is at Wendelle's home two days, they begin to receive hand-written threatening notes insisting O'Ryan "come home" to Delta 6. These notes continue to be delivered throughout the six weeks, and one of the notes includes a severed human finger.

O'Ryan and Wendelle conclude O'Ryan's own Delta 6 Special Forces colleagues from S-4 have been sent after him. They come to believe, however, that O'Ryan will not be picked up until all the caches are in the hands of the government.

Wendelle becomes apprehensive and O'Ryan is moved to the home of Arizona Jim Dilettoso, one of Wendelle's close colleagues. Gem Cox, Wendelle's grandson, with whom O'Ryan has become close, accompanies O'Ryan. While at Dilettoso's home, the parties become aware of two covert intrusions onto the property.

The threatening tone of the notes escalates; O'Ryan is called a "traitor" and informed a "termination" order has been issued against him. Somehow O'Ryan arranges a meeting with his CIA "mentor" at an airport. Following this, O'Ryan's behavior becomes erratic. After the severed finger arrives at his home, Dilettoso asks Cox and O'Ryan to leave.

They do and travel to Florida ostensibly to retrieve one of the caches of photos. An associate of Wendelle's, a woman named Omec Onec goes with them. The effort to retrieve the cache of photos proves unsuccessful, and Gem and the woman return to Arizona without O'Ryan. In the meantime O'Ryan makes his way back to Wendelle's home but remains only a short time. After he leaves, Wendelle never hears from O'Ryan again.

not all we would want, and the reader will notice the too frequent use here of the term "according to Wendelle." Wendelle is interviewed extensively on Rick Keefe's YouTube documentary, and so are O'Ryan and Dilettoso. However, Gem Cox is missing from the film and the woman who accompanied Cox and O'Ryan to Florida, Omnee Once, is also missing.

As for O'Ryan's interview, it centers on descriptions of S-4. Some of the other information we are interested in here, including O'Ryan's work as a government assassin, and the circumstances of his alleged fatal disease, are not attested, or not fully attested to by O'Ryan in the taped interview. Instead, it is Wendelle Stevens who tells us the most about these subjects.

Much of what Wendelle speaks about is information derived from conversations among O'Ryan, Stevens, Cox and Dilettoso during the six-week period, information which was never put on tape but which is recalled by Stevens and Dilettoso.

Dilettoso seems to have kept his distance from O'Ryan and lodged Cox and O'Ryan in an out building, not in his home. Dilettoso, a computer engineer and longtime UFO photo analyst, tells what he recalls in the YouTube documentary, but more of what we learn relies on the recollections (testimony) of Wendelle Stevens.

In addition, several documents are shown on screen in the Keefe YouTube film, including several of the threatening notes, the W2-like form, and the alleged order to assassinate the man in Hungary, on CIA letterhead. Readers will want to watch the excellent Keefe documentary to gain the fullest understanding of this case.

Wendelle Stevens' credibility

Wendelle Stevens has held the Connor O'Ryan story for 18 years, although he did release some of it in 1998 and 2001. He held the story, he says, out of concern the O'Ryan events were some sort of trap set for him by the US to compromise his credibility and possibly incriminate him; and also for concern for the safety of Connor O'Ryan. Now, due to Wendelle's advancing years and the urgings of colleagues, the full story is being released, I am told.

My own view of Wendelle Stevens takes into account his advancing years (86), the length of time he held the story, his extended tenure in ufology dating from the 1960s, his military service to our country, and Wendelle's many loyal friends in the UFO community.

Based on these factors, I believe Steven's account. It is hard to imagine he would leave a hoax as his final legacy after some 50 years in ufology. There are some discrepancies in Wendelle's account, but I chalk these up to the many details involved in this case and the 18 years of elapsed time.

"...a crazy ass disease"

Connor O'Ryan said the doctors at S-4 told him he had a fatal form of Hodgkin's disease. But did he in fact have a fatal disease and if he did, was he infected with the disease by his superior at S-4 as a form of assassination by fatal disease?

One of the problems with this idea is the disease O'Ryan claimed, Hodgkin's, is not fatal. Hodgkin's, a cancer of the lymph system, is said to be highly curable. Furthermore, O'Ryan reportedly had no symptoms and felt perfectly well.

Here is what O'Ryan says on tape about his alleged disease: "At my last physical they told me I've contracted a form of Hodgkin's disease. To be perfectly honest, I don't know what the truth is or not." At another point, regarding his medical condition, "I'm still checking that out." He also says, "I've been discharged for medical reasons; I'm unfit to perform my duties." Also, "It became an obsession to find out [about Area 51 and S-4], because I almost feared for my own safety. I didn't want to walk away with some crazy ass disease."

In an interview Wendelle told me the following. My questions in italics:

I tried to take him to a doctor, but he wouldn't go. He said, "I don't want to know about it. I don't want to be planning my death every day. If I've got it, I'll go when it happens. If I haven't got it, they lied to me." He said he felt perfectly healthy. ... and his conclusion was, if he had a disease, ... his superiors at S-4 had given it to him. And he's going to bring the whole house of cards down before he died.

Do you think that's what led him to become a renegade?

Yes, because he had $300,000 in the bank and he's gonna die before he could spend it.

What was the disease they told him he had?

Hodgkin's Disease, but it does not move that fast unless it's a particularly virulent form, like intelligence uses.

Did he indicate he ever killed anyone by infecting them with a disease?

No, he did not do that. He used a pistol.

Dilettoso confirms

Did O'Ryan tell others besides Wendelle that he might have a fatal disease and how he thought he might have gotten it? He told Jim Dilettoso.

"I do recall," Jim said in an email, "generalities O'Ryan told me, [including] his concern he had contracted a specific fatal disease (or would in the future); his concern that his female associate [girlfriend] had contracted a specific fatal disease; and his belief that specific fatal diseases are covertly injected into human targets who would otherwise be assassinated by conventional means."

By "injected," did Jim mean medical injection? Yes, he did. Jim also confirmed O'Ryan claimed to be a government assassin.

As for the "female associate [girlfriend]" mentioned in Jim's email, I'm told O'Ryan did not have a girlfriend, but one of his S-4 confederates did, and O'Ryan knew her. Perhaps she is the woman referred to.

"Special mission" means assassination

On video O'Ryan says little about being a government assassin. He mentions only "special missions." In an interview, Wendelle told me the following:

[O'Ryan said he was] one of the Special Forces executioners used by the government [who] carry out "special missions." I said, "Isn't that murder?" He said, "Of course not! It's not murder. It's what we're trained to do—take out enemies of the American government," and he says, "When there's a traitor or a spy or somebody in the government who needs to be removed and he may have secrets they don't want to come out in court, we take care of it."

He had a tattoo on his left bicep with a mark for every "special mission," and I came to understand a "special mission" is a government execution. He had 18 marks.

You mean like notches in a belt?

Yes.

Was the man in Budapest he supposedly assassinated an American citizen?

Yes, an American Army Green Beret, senior sergeant.

Why was he assassinated?

They didn't tell O'Ryan. They just ... said he was to terminate a man by this name assigned to the Embassy in Budapest. ... a mug sheet showing front and side pictures with his fingerprints, where he lived, maps to and from his work and to and from the school where the kids went and to and from the grocery store. All those things.

He disappeared in the crowd

O'Ryan was given Hungarian clothes, shoes, and cap and a weapon with Hungarian ammunition, and paired with another Special Forces troop. ... They were given keys to an apartment rented in their Hungarian names in Budapest, and they stayed there one day planning their operation. Two days later they carried it out and executed the guy coming out of a grocery store with his arms full of groceries in front of his two teenage kids in the car, and disappeared in the crowd, went back to the Embassy, got their own clothes back, turned in the Hungarian clothes, were driven to the airport immediately by an Embassy car, put on an airplane and sent out of the country.

Did you ever confirm this man had been murdered, independently from what Connor told you?

No, I did not. I left that to somebody else because I knew if I started meddling in it I'd get too close to the subject. [Author's note: this statement reflects Wendelle's concern the O'Ryan episode was a trap intended to compromise or incriminate him.]

Do people understand that if they become assassins—

Wait a minute. They don't consider themselves assassins. O'Ryan told me, "Our training is to take out enemies of the US government, and that guy was characterized as an enemy." He said, "We don't disbelieve our superiors. He was a spy and had to go. We couldn't afford to take him to trial." Sounds like O'Ryan's mind was divided. On the one hand, he was still defending what he had done—Oh yeah! He didn't think he had done anything wrong. He was so patriotic when he saw the American flag go up the flagpole, he wept. So he was still holding on to these ideas even after he became a renegade himself...

Yes, he was defending the position. He said, "There are traitors who have secrets the government can't afford to expose in a trial, and they have to be terminated before they can release the secrets. That's our job."

Yet he was on the run?

Yes. He was being terminated himself, he thought.

A deepening vulnerability

So, did he regard himself as dangerous to the government? Did he regard his own execution as justified?

Well, he said, "I probably know too much after the 18th assassination." Any of those could come back on him.

So he was close, or on the edge, of justifying his own assassination?

Right. He believed them when they told him

[he had a fatal disease] because he said he felt vulnerable during the last couple of executions when he was doing the same thing to other Special Forces troops. He had a feeling they might know too much, too, and have to go.
You mean he began to suspect he and they were not that different?
Yes.

And he comes almost to the point where he says, 'I can understand why they'd need to take me out.'
Yeah, right.

So then why didn't he just volunteer? He didn't go that far...

He had $300,000 and he didn't want to die with that still in the bank. I explained to him, "When they put those bonuses in the bank, if you die they just take [the money] back." He said, "I know that, but I don't want 'em to; that's my money."

Did he have any heirs? Was he married?
No. He was an orphan raised by foster parents he was not close to.

So he didn't have children?

That's the way they're selected [by the government]; that's what qualifies them.

Why do you think they didn't grab him before he got to you?

They could have grabbed him at any time. And they sent his own—he was a member of Delta 6, a Seal team in Area 51—they sent his own team after him, which tells you how sincere they are. He was part of Delta 6 and they sent his own teammates to get him! But they knew they couldn't take him out, couldn't do anything with him until they got all the caches. They figured out he had made six copies of the pictures and put them in five different locations, and they had to get all the pictures before they terminated him.

Intrusion of the Ninjas, first

As indicated above, there were two covert intrusions on the Dilettoso property during the six weeks. Wendelle tells the story of the first intrusion as he learned it from his grandson, Gem Cox.

Gem and Connor were asleep in the bungalow on Dilettoso's property. In the middle of the night, Gem woke up to find a man standing on his bed astride him and pointing an AK47 at Gem's head. The man was dressed entirely in black, in Ninja style clothing including one-toed Ninja boots. Gem looked across the room and saw an identically dressed man standing on Connor's bed, his gun pointed at Connor. Connor did not wake up and apparently the man guarding Gem did not realize Gem was awake.

Gem also saw a third man, wearing a business suit, searching the room. After observing this, Gem lost consciousness. When Gem and Connor awoke the next morning it was very late, long after they would normally have gotten up.

According to Wendelle, O'Ryan told him that

A note O'Ryan received. "Ghostwalker 1" is O'Ryan's code name. T.W.E.P. means "termination with extreme prejudice." The meaning of "test tube program" is unknown. A triangle pointing up means "all is well," pointing down means the opposite. "Malakie" refers to an assassination where a helicopter was made to crash and all aboard died along with the target (see JAR page 25).

people working for the government who break into people's houses at night use a gas they inject into the room at a window frame. The gas renders the inhabitants unconscious for 20-30 minutes.

Intrusion of the Ninjas, second

The other intrusion occurred in November at Dilettoso's one or two days after O'Ryan, Gem and Omneec Onee had left the property. As Dilettoso relates in the Keefe documentary, he awoke during the night when exterior lights came on triggered by motion detectors outside his home.

Jim called the police, then he cut all the lights off and looked out the window. "I saw someone go around the side of my house no more than 5 feet from me. He had on a Ninja outfit, all black, hood and mask." Jim then began turning the light on and off to frighten the intruder.

When the police arrived, they found Ninja footprints. Jim had been irrigating his lawn and it was wet. The intruder had been on the wet lawn, then ran onto a dry sidewalk, leaving wet footprints. "The footprints looked like a one-toed sock, like martial arts foot gear which for me matched what the guy had on," Dilettoso says.

What derailed O'Ryan?

Let's consider the origins of what happened to Connor O'Ryan. Originally, I'm told, O'Ryan was not planning to leave the military. Special Forces was his home. He was so patriotic he wept on seeing the American flag. Only weak family ties tugged at him from civilian life. According to Wendelle, O'Ryan was abandoned by his mother as a child or infant and raised by a foster family he was "not close to." As for the assassinations, O'Ryan claimed they didn't bother him; they were simply—his "job."

For years, then, O'Ryan felt no fundamental conflict with his role in Special Forces. According to Wendelle, he had been planning on remaining in the military and

"making a career of it." But something went wrong, very wrong, for Connor O'Ryan.

Perhaps they made him do too many assassinations, including of men who seemed very like O'Ryan himself, men such as the young Special Forces sergeant he said he killed in Hungary in 1991. In 10 years O'Ryan said he committed 18 assassinations. That's 1.8 a year. So every six months O'Ryan had to kill somebody.

Notwithstanding, it was S-4 that seems to have driven O'Ryan over the edge. Being a sentry at S-4 was boring, and the security was draconian, but there was more. It seems to have been the vulnerability he felt on learning the profound nature of the secret he was guarding that destabilized Connor O'Ryan.

"I'd already done nine years in covert operations with a Seal team," O'Ryan says on tape, "so I think they pretty much trusted me to keep my mouth shut, which I would've. I don't want to be one for ringing the bells, but this goes way beyond covert operations."

Connor says it took him two weeks from the beginning of his assignment at S-4 to figure out what was going on there. But apparently, after he figured it out, it got to him. Or maybe it was it was not only S-4, but S-4 combined with everything else in Connor O'Ryan's life.

They took pictures

O'Ryan found three others at S-4 who couldn't take it either. They brought a small camera in and took pictures. When exactly this activity was discovered by those in charge of S-4 we do not know. However, one way to look at the events which followed is to say these events are best

PROJECT GALILEO PROJECT SIDEKICK PROJECT LOOKING GLASS

"The program out at Area S-4 consisted of three projects: Project Galileo, Project Sidekick and Project Looking Glass. Project Galileo dealt with gravity propulsion. Project Sidekick dealt with a beam weapon that had a neutron source, and was focused by a gravity lens. Project Looking Glass dealt with the physics of seeing back in time ... I was not personally involved with the hardware of Project Sidekick or Looking Glass."

PROJECT GALILEO

"These briefings contained a wide spectrum of information... mostly relating to aliens and alien technology. These reports appeared to be an overview of alien information which could be used to brief scientists from any field about the scope of the whole project, and not just their specific field of endeavor. The overview of Project Galileo was accurate. I read the overview and later witnessed evidence which proved it to be accurate."

"I not only saw two of the three interior levels but I also saw it fully functional in flight. And, no, unfortunately I didn't get to go for a ride in it. This particular disc appeared to be in excellent condition and because of its sleek appearance, I nicknamed it the 'Sport Model.' The 'Sport Model' is about sixteen feet tall and forty feet in diameter. The exterior skin of the disc is metal which is the color of unpolished stainless steel. The 'Sport Model' sits on its belly when not energized."

In 1989, Lazar made public Project Galileo explained by assuming the activity was discovered after the caches of photos had been stowed outside the facility.

What would the government do? Neutralizing the 4 conspirators immediately would have been an option, but what about the caches? Did they decide to falsely tell O'Ryan he was dying and then turn him loose on the street so he could lead them to the caches? Does this explain everything?

"You have a fatal disease"

We don't know the exact circumstances of O'Ryan leaving the military. On tape, O'Ryan says, "I've been discharged for medical reasons; I'm unfit to perform my duties."

According to Wendelle, "A few days after the physical when the blood tests had time to get reported back they called him in and told him he had a fatal disease that would take him out in two or three weeks. They were going to discharge him and let him go home to straighten out his personal affairs before his death."

However, elsewhere on the video O'Ryan says, "They were going to put me back in the regular Navy but I didn't want that because I've always been part of a Seal team. So they promised me I would be taken care of medically, but I [privately] talked to my colleagues [his confederates] at the facility and we decided since I'm in this kind of situation [dying]... we're going to try to bring this out in the open."

From these inconsistent characterizations we can't tell whose idea it was O'Ryan be discharged. The scenario in which O'Ryan is told point blank he has a "fatal" disease and "two weeks to live" is not normal medical practice. Normally, doctors do not declare any condition "terminal." They say, "You're very ill and we're starting treatment."

On the street

If O'Ryan had a naturally-occurring disease, he ought to have been transferred to a military hospital. That this procedure was not followed is the main reason I believe O'Ryan was falsely told he had a fatal disease. Another reason is, he was not ill. By all accounts he looked and felt perfectly well, and an individual who will die in "two weeks" does not feel perfectly well.

Alternatively, O'Ryan might not have been sent to a hospital if the government intended to assassinate him and had given by him a fatal disease, but in that case, why would they tell him about it?

There is the suggestion in the above that O'Ryan chose to leave the military. Perhaps he was told you can be transferred back to the "regular Navy" and "taken care of medically," or you can be discharged and "go home to straighten out your affairs." If this is what happened, it sounds calculated to me.

I cannot believe O'Ryan's superiors would have put him on the street unless they had something very different in mind than what they told him. A 29-year old whose whole adult life had been in Special Forces, with little or no family ties, an assassin with 18 notches in his belt, privy to the biggest military secret in history, who thinks he's dying, and whom the government knows has committed espionage. No, they wouldn't put him on the street unless it was a calculated move. Apparently, the government wanted O'Ryan on the street.

O'Ryan said the doctors at S-4 told him he had a fatal form of Hodgkin's disease. But did he? And if he did, we he infected with the disease by his superiors at S-4 as a form of assassination by fatal disease? One of the problems with this idea is the disease O'Ryan claimed, Hodgkin's, is not fatal. Furthermore, O'Ryan had no symptoms and felt perfectly well.

Then too there is the disease, allegedly Hodgkin's. Hodgkin's is not equivalent to the common cold, but it's highly curable. It's as though they were telling him, "If you're bright enough, you'll see through this pretense, but we don't think you're bright enough." Or, more correctly, we think you'll be too desperate to think straight.

And sure enough, although nobody I've talked to knows what O'Ryan did in the weeks between his discharge and the point he phoned Wendelle, the one thing we know he did not do was go to a civilian doctor to find out if he was ill or not. And when he got to Wendelle's house, he refused to see a physician.

"...you'd get as far as 7..."

Furthermore, "techniques" were being used on O'Ryan (and apparently all the other guards at S-4). I refer to the periods O'Ryan was blacked out during his physicals or during his security screenings. "You'd go in a room and they would hook us up to an IV. They'd tell us, count to 10 and you'd reach as far as seven and that would be it. You'd wake up 50 minutes later with a tremendous headache."

Most certainly, Connor could have been directed under hypnosis as to what choice he would make upon learning he had a fatal disease. 'You will choose immediate discharge' he could have been told.

But the main thing is, if getting the caches was the issue, it should have been easy for those in charge at S-4 to use the same means—drugs and hypnosis—to determine where the photo caches were stored. They wouldn't have needed to chase O'Ryan around the country, which they subsequently did.

The idea O'Ryan had a fatal disease, and the idea the government had given him a fatal disease in order to assassinate him does not hold up well. So why was O'Ryan told he had a fatal disease? Subsequent events suggest the government was aware of the espionage O'Ryan was engaged in, and it appears to me destabilizing O'Ryan and putting him on the street was part of what the government decided to do about it.

The noose tightens

How does the situation appear from O'Ryan's point of view? He has no evidence his superiors at S-4 are aware of the espionage. He hasn't been questioned; his confederates still have their normal jobs at S-4 and they haven't been questioned.

All that's happened is suddenly O'Ryan is terminally ill and about that he is deeply suspicious. He is sure the disease is not a natural event and that the government is assassinating him. Since he hasn't been accused of espionage, all he can think is that he is being eliminated because of the 18 assassinations.

It does not appear O'Ryan initially thought his superiors at S-4 might be lying about the disease. Probably that dawned on him only later as the weeks went by and he did not die.

Instead, O'Ryan is perfectly prepared to believe the government has infected him with a fatal disease. So the question arises, was there anything in O'Ryan's background that familiarized him with assassination by fatal disease?

Wendelle gave me two different answers on that. I asked, Did O'Ryan ever participate in giving anyone a fatal disease? "No, he used a pistol," Wendelle said.

But in the Keefe documentary, Wendelle says something different: "O'Ryan knew they use virulent strains of cancer and other diseases because he had been involved in some operations involving diseases, and accidents too."

The part about the accidents refers to O'Ryan's allegation he knew of assassinations accomplished by helicopters made to crash and buses blown up where innocent persons were killed along with the target. One of the threatening notes from Delta 6 refers to the helicopter crash assassination, and a newspaper article about the so-called "accident" is shown in the Keefe film. But I learned no details about what O'Ryan may have known about assassination by fatal disease except for the statement he made to Dilettoso about "injections."

Therefore, whether O'Ryan believed in the reality of assassination by fatal disease because he had firsthand knowledge of it, or whether he believed it simply because it is possible and therefore in principle might be done, I do not know.

It should also be noted that Wendelle Stevens, through whose eyes we are seeing this case, fervently believes US intelligence engages in the practice of assassination by fatal disease, and he will elaborate on it at a moment's notice, citing other cases where he believes this occurred. If it's pointed out that Hodgkin's is not a fatal disease, Wendelle will say the government has engineered its own "fast moving" lethal strains.

It wasn't the assassinations

So O'Ryan ends up at Wendelle's house, and there were really two questions at that point. Did he really have a fatal disease? And why had he been discharged?

As noted, it must have started dawning on O'Ryan there was more to his discharge than met the eye when the Wendelle Stevens has held the Connor O'Ryan story for 18 years out of concern, he says, that the O'Ryan events were some sort of trap set for him by the US to compromise his credibility and possibly incriminate him; and also for concern for the safety of Connor O'Ryan.

weeks went by and he did not die or even fall ill. After all, he'd been told he had only "two weeks" to live.

In addition, 30 minutes after telephoning Wendelle, O'Ryan's bank accounts were frozen and Wendelle had to send him money for the bus ride. O'Ryan also thought he was under physical surveillance in the bus station and that is why he mailed to Wendelle the cache of photos he allegedly had with him, instead of carrying them on his person.

My impression is that on arriving at Wendelle's, O'Ryan still clung to the notion all his troubles stemmed from the 18 assassinations. If that were true, the caches might still be secure and he could fulfill his purpose of getting one of them to the public.

The fear that pervaded both Wendelle and O'Ryan was that S-4 was always going to be O'Ryan's last assignment. The idea was that after O'Ryan's 17th assassination he already "knew too much" to be allowed to survive. He was used goods, so send him to S-4, deepen the contamination; it doesn't matter because he was destined to be eliminated.

Filmmaker Rick Keefe has a dark vision of the dynamic at work in O'Ryan's situation. "You don't get out of some of these jobs alive," Keefe says. "They have one kill the next in a chain of assassinations. Once you've seen enough to compromise the leaders" you're doomed, Keefe believes. "They leave no one at the bottom alive."

It was just this kind of reasoning that apparently had made O'Ryan so uneasy after he got to S-4. "It became an obsession to find out [about Area 51 and S-4] because I almost feared for my own safety," he had said. And so, out of a deepening sense of vulnerability, O'Ryan perversely began to dig his own grave.

"We were told if we breached a security system at the facility (S-4) we'd be terminated," O'Ryan says on tape. And he then proceeded to do exactly that.

"Desperate" is how Wendelle Stevens describes Connor O'Ryan. After 18 years of examining this case from all angles, Wendelle has come to believe O'Ryan was not a "plant" and was not lying. As Wendelle sees him, O'Ryan was driven by a sense of doom.

Whatever was in Connor O'Ryan's mind during the bus trip to Wendelle's home, within 48 hours O'Ryan and Stevens realized the espionage at S-4 had been discovered.

One clue was O'Ryan telephoned the girlfriend of one of his confederates, that is, one of the four who'd taken the pictures. Reportedly, the woman said she had not heard

- 10 -

But they never picked him up. Right through to the end of this bizarre escapade, Connor O'Ryan was never arrested, and the last time Wendelle saw O'Ryan, he was still free. He drove away from Wendelle's house in a car with a woman he met in Florida whom he apparently persuaded to drive him from Florida back to Arizona. As Wendelle says, "They could have picked him up at any time," but they never did.

Waterboarding would have worked

The idea O'Ryan was not picked up because of the caches doesn't hold up. O'Ryan insisted that was the case, and at the time Wendelle succumbed to the idea as well, but it doesn't hold up. All the government had to do to wring every bit of information out of Connor O'Ryan was to use drugs and hypnosis, and if not, they could have resorted to old-fashioned waterboarding.

Frankly? The only reason I can see why this whole O'Ryan scenario was allowed to play out was as a training exercise for the Special Forces—a training exercise and possibly punishment of Connor O'Ryan and an object lesson for any number of people on the inside who participated or had knowledge of it.

Sending a message

Borne home to all insiders concerned would have been a message, the message of the futility, the sheer folly, of rebelling against or attempting to betray the security apparatus of the United States government. On display for many people to see, including, by the way, Wendelle Stevens, would have been the ruthless efficiency of the methods and technologies the US has at its disposal to discover and neutralize traitors.

So Connor O'Ryan, we have to see him as a 1991 version of Winston Smith from Orwell's novel 1984. After he was finally arrested and brought "home," we can picture them saying to him,

"Oh, come now, Connor, you didn't really think you and your three pals could get away with this little plot of yours, did you?"

As close as we'll get

Finally, what about the fatal disease?

As the foregoing makes clear, I do not believe Connor O'Ryan had a fatal disease and that means we do not have here an example of the US government assassinating someone by using a fatal disease. We do have here, apparently, a case of the US government assassinating an American citizen, the Special Forces from her boyfriend and the "feared the worst." Another clue was the package O'Ryan had mailed to Wendelle failed to arrive.

They sent his own team—he was a member of Delta 6, a Seal team in Area 51—they sent his own team after him, which tells you how sincere they are. He was part of Delta 6 and they sent his own teammates to get him!

"You're a traitor"

Still another clue, and it was a biggie, were the notes that started arriving written in Special Forces lingo accusing O'Ryan of being a "traitor." The notes had symbols in them representing various of the photo caches, with some symbols x-ed out indicating that cache had been seized. This kind of thing continued with the tension escalating in a war of nerves.

Then there was the incident with O'Ryan's ID card. O'Ryan had left S-4 with his S-4 entry card, which he shouldn't have been able to do. One night at Wendelle's he buried the ID card in the backyard before going out to dinner. On return, the ID was gone. That suggested to Wendelle and O'Ryan the ID card had a tracking device in it, and that meant wherever O'Ryan had gone post discharge, the government had known where he was. O'Ryan then suggested there might be other tracking devices, even inside his body.

No where to hide

Why did the people shadowing O'Ryan pick up the card? That would further alien O'Ryan he had been tracked.

"We were told if we breached a security system at the facility (S-4) we'd be terminated," O'Ryan says. So he then proceeded to do exactly that.

All I can think of is it was calculated to further unnerve O'Ryan, intentionally letting him know all his activities were transparent to his pursuers. In the meantime, probably there was another tracking device in O'Ryan's body or they wouldn't have sacrificed the card. A real cat and mouse game.

sergeant in Hungary.

And we also have a case of an insider, Connor O'Ryan, someone who had reason to know, quite prepared to believe himself a victim of assassination by fatal disease at the hands of the US government. This case doesn't prove the US does this kind of thing, but it is about as close to substantiation as I expect we will get.

2 I am unable to find the term "Black Seal" in use. Perhaps the term is a colloquialism used by Special Forces personnel but not having official status.

O'Ryan has no evidence his superiors at S-4 are aware of the espionage. He hasn't been questioned; his confederates still have their normal jobs at S-4 and they haven't been questioned. All that's happened is suddenly O'Ryan is terminally ill.

Obama spends two days at Nellis AFB, home of Area 51

Two days.

President Barack Obama just spent two days inside Nellis Air Force Base, home to the most guarded air space in the United States: R4808-N, also known as Area 51, and its most top secret facility, S-4. Obama stayed overnight at Nellis on Tuesday night, before he spoke publicly on Wednesday the 27th of May, 2009.

Obama speaking at Nellis AFB

Obama chose Nellis AFB to promote his administration's new $787 billion stimulus bill in Nevada, which will only receive less than $1 billion ($868 million) of the stimulus funds. Obama, with Sen. Harry Reid, Majority leader, also had time to tour Nellis' 72,000 panel solar energy project that provides about 25% of the Air Force Base's energy needs.

Obama spoke for about fifteen minutes to several hundred members of the U.S. military. "We want," Obama stated, "to make sure that our bases and our facilities are the best in the world for our best troops." Obama also acknowledged that some of the troops that he was addressing would soon be deployed to Iraq.

Obama's plan puts only $467 million toward developing green energy in the next few years.

Two days which included an overnight stay, a quick solar energy tour, and a fifteen-minute speech which reveals Obama is still approving more troops in Iraq, and 0.06% (that's 1/6000th) of the stimulus package toward developing green energy.

Why announce in Nevada at all, when none of the 100 projects was in Nevada? The Obama political team is saavy. The political missed opportunity to plug into popularity at a state that would get two or more of the 100 projects seems like a no-brainer, right? But they announce at Nellis AFB, not even Las Vegas or Reno where you have many more voting constituents than on a restricted airbase. Right there-- the lack of saavy-- makes me feel suspicious...

What did the President do minute-by-minute during the other many hours he was next door to R-4808-N aka Area 51 and S-4? I must admit that after what I have learned through study for the S-4 documentary I'm finishing that personally, as a citizen, I don't trust any of the information that comes out of there at face value, and disapprove of the actions of the most senior leadership in charge of America's activities at Area 51 since its inception.

Is there any reason to suspect that Obama did more at the home base of Area 51 than we are told? I still want to have hope in Obama. Why can't there be more press and exposure there? It's not like members of the press are going to get away with running off with sensitive information about the aircraft being tested there, especially when the base personnel know the press is on its way. Why distance the press? I don't get it. The press should be able to follow the President through most of his time there, even if it is a sensitive base, in an open and free society.

Why are we giving our freedom (and journalistic freedom) away? Why isn't the press asserting its first amendment rights over "national security" and "state secrets" b.s. policies and denial by reckless, law-breaking (can you say FISA) previous administrations?

Why are there no Senate inquiries into Cheney (his assassination ring and S-4)?

Cheney allegedly directed assassination ring from White House

Congressman Dennis Kucinich (D-Ohio), on Monday March 16th, 2009 called on the House Oversight Chairman for an investigation and for a formal congressional probe into charges made by a New Yorker journalist that former Vice President Dick Cheney ran an assassination ring out of his Vice Presidential office.

Kucinich made the formal request after comments by investigative reporter Seymour Hersh that allege that Cheney was the leader of an "executive assassination ring" that operated abroad without Congressional authorization. Many moderates and liberals are doubtful that this, along with the many other crimes of the Bush Administration, will be properly investigated and prosecuted, based on the poor government track record so far of pursuing high war crimes charges against the highest officials of the Bush Administration, like Cheney and Karl Rove.

Kucinich wrote: "Mr. Hersh made the allegation before an audience at the University of Minnesota on Tuesday, March 10, 2009, in which he [New Yorker journalist Seymour Hersh] stated, 'Under President Bush's authority, they've been going into countries, not talking to the ambassador or the CIA station chief, and finding people on a list and executing them and leaving. It is a special wing of our special operations community that is set up independently. They do not report to anybody, except in the Bush-Cheney days, they reported directly to the Cheney office... Congress has no oversight of it...'. If true, these operations violate longstanding U.S. policy regarding covert actions and illegally bypass Congressional oversight. Hersh is within a year or more of releasing a book that is said to include evidence of this allegation. However, we cannot wait a year or more to establish the truth," said Kucinich.

An Observation on the Decay of U.S. Law

The laws of America current, while enacted, are not necessarily fundamentally legal or constitutional, and do not necessarily reflect the intent of Constitutional law and the concepts of justice for all, non-biased jurisprudence, and the ethics of fair and impartial law as prescribed in the Bill of Rights and the Constitution.

Rick Keefe

to wit:

- The state of Habeas Corpus
- Line-Item Veto, destroying checks and balances between branches of the government, allowing for an Executive branch to gain and wield increasingly more power, which it has used to ensnare the Supreme Court, and has struck deals with certain military commanders
- Electronic voting and federal voting mandates
- Lack of prosecution of Bush, Reagan, and Clinton Administration officials, and certain Department of Defense ranking officers for breach of duty and treason
- Taxation Without Representation in the form of Dept. of Defense black budgets.
- Taxation Without Representation in the Form of wars based on false premises.
- Crimes Against Citizens of Other Countries in the Form of wars based on false premises.
- Treasonable Acts like September 11th going without proper civilian and congressional co-investigation and prosecutions.
- Gov't spending programs awarding no-bid contracts to Bush Administration insiders.
- The deceptive practice of garnering a social security tax without restoration of the near-bankrupt social security program.
- The abandonment of good faith and social contracts with the citizens of the United States by officials of the Bush Administration.
- The destruction of the Integrity of the Supreme Court through biased and politicized appointments, rather than appointments based on merit, impartiality, and in protection of the common good.
2008 Jan 15th Supreme Court ruling protects third parties who "knowingly worked on a transaction that defrauded investors," offering bankers immunity from prosecution.
 Balance is long gone.
- The implementation of a system of federal tax laws designed to significantly increase the wealth of a small, elite percentage of individuals, while decreasing drastically the wealth of the state republics and commensurately their citizens.
- The lack of action and collapse of FEMA along with the White House's lack of response that led to prolonged, needless suffering and death of the poor population of New Orleans and the southern Mississippi coast. Genocide can be successfully argued in this case.
- Excessive and unwarranted presidential pardons.

The United States has a self-serving need to address fixing these unlawful imbalances of its system quickly, or just as quickly the decay of U.S. law will be worse and more injurious to all United States citizens.
